SPEAKING TOPICS

Phil covers a variety of topics, including food industry economics and “all things dairy.” Below you’ll find some of his most requested presentations:

The State of the American Consumer

Understanding consumer trends and potential is critical to solving the demand puzzle. With that in mind, we take audiences through the macroeconomic data, public surveys and anecdotal reports that tell us where consumers are at and, critically, where they appear to be going in the months ahead.

Feeding the World

Why is American agriculture uniquely situated to meet increased demand for food around the globe? What are the economic opportunities and risks? How do evolving US food culture and food politics fit into the picture? An optimistic – but eminently realistic – assessment.

The Supply-Side Quest

More people globally with more money means more demand for dairy products. Where will the milk come from? Is the US well positioned to play a large role? What about post-quota Europe? Is New Zealand growth sustainable? This presentation looks at supply-side dynamics in a global context.

Other popular topics include: Dairy Market Situation and Outlook, Dairy Policy: Problems and Prescriptions, and Global Dairy Market Convergence

RAVE REVIEWS

Phil’s presentations are always informative, insightful and engaging. He has become a regular feature at our annual meeting, and our attendees always look forward to hearing from him. His material is always fresh, current and relevant to his audience. It’s presented in a way (with a little humor) that people like to listen to. That’s the reason we keep inviting him back!

David L. Thomas, CEO

American Dairy Products Institute

We’ve had Phil Plourd speak about the dairy industry at several CoBank events. He’s a terrific speaker. He’s knowledgeable, engaging and articulate. Moreover, the Q&A sessions at the end of his presentations are as good as or even better than the presentations, and that’s saying a lot.
